An important message from MAD's Director of Business & Development, JEFFREY LOZENGE

Commitment. It's a word often used. Commitment. See? I've used it twice already. But commitment is not contentment. It's spelled differently and pronounced differently and means something different because it IS different. This goes without saying, but I said it anyway.

Which brings me to MAD. Yes, MAD — the magazine whose time is and was and continues to be — says many things to many people that don't need to be said to anyone. But MAD says them anyway because it goes without saying that they MUST be said. Just like what I said about commitment.

The importance of this cannot be overstated because it has no importance. But just as things that don't need to be said must be said, things that don't seem important often are. And vice versa. Like marriage. Like MAD.

To recap: "Something old, something new, something borrowed, something MAD."

WIT TO BE TIED

I've always wanted to write a letter to MAD, but was always too lazy to actually write one or to even send one. Glad you've entered into the world of technology for a geek like me who doesn't really like leaving my computer for too long. Too bad I don't have anything witty to say, but it's fun to e-mail you guys nonetheless!

AM Ciotola, Exeter, PA

DJ AM — Thank you for being so upfront and honest. But just because you don't have anything witty to say, don't let that stop you from writing an e-mail. After all, it doesn't stop us from putting out a magazine! —Ed. P.S. Big congrats to you! Your e-mail was the first printed from letters@madmagazine.com! No more costly postage stamps or painful paper-cuts! E-mail can't be beat!

A CASE OF GHANA-READER

I am Paul from Ghana. MAD is fast establishing itself here in Ghana and particularly my school. After reading my first issue of MAD I have learned to love it and so am doing my best to spread the news of MAD in my school. I am counting on a few issues, which I think if my submission to the Letters and Tomatoes is considered, I will share them with my pals here in school, so they also can join the band of lunatics.

Paul Gerhardt Fleischer, Teshie, Ghana

Paulie Walnuts — We were so excited to get your letter! We had no idea we even had any readers in Ghana. We don't know if you've been following the U.S. news, but lately, it's become very fashionable for American celebrities such as Madonna and Angelina Jolie to adopt African children. And we decided we want in on that action! So pack your bags and tell your parents that you've got a new family here in America. We're gonna have our legal department look into it, but we're hoping by this time next year, we'll have a new permanent addition to the MAD family! —Ed.

MAD'S NEWEST BATHROOM COMPANION

Ha Ha Ha! Brilliant cover of Tom-Kat and baby Suri. I bought that issue without looking inside. I took the cover off and taped it to my bathroom wall, it gives me a reason to smile when I go to the john!

Jeff S., Seattle, WA

Jeffy Pop — We wish more readers would follow your example and buy the magazine without looking inside (people reading it only seems to hurt our sales!) In more important matters though, we want to know what it's doing hanging in your bathroom and why it's making you smile — actually, on second thought, we'd rather stay in the dark on this one! Thanks for writing and happy flushing! —Ed.

FOOL BRITANNIA

I live in England and I think your magazine is awesome, especially Planet Tad and Spy Vs. Spy. I wish loads of shops here had it, but they're all rubbish. I just want to say two things. One, I think your drawings of Alfred are cool, can you do a "How to draw Alfred" part of the magazine? Also, I want to ask, why do most American cartoons make British people look so posh and always have them drinking tea? Please answer because I'm sure a load of people want to know this too. I've got to go, my pot of tea is ready — Cheerio!

Jamie Papasavvas, London, England

Papa Smurfas — We get a lot of letters from fans asking us how to draw Alfred. However, we get even more letters from MAD cover artist Mark Fredrickson begging us not to give away his secrets so he can continue to eke out a meager living illustrating Alfred. Surely, Jamie, as a posh British bloke, you're busy enough with your fox hunts and polo matches and don't need to take away poor Mark's livelihood as well. Your insolent letter has been a shocking reminder of why the colonies left in the first place! God save the Queen! —Ed.

The Big Easel

Anita Eenink and Michael Dallaston of Australia sent in these amazing customized Spy Vs. Spy Legos. What's great about these is that after one of the Spys gets blown to smithereens, he can be put right back together! Remember, if you've depicted a MAD character in a weird, offbeat or unconventional medium, please send it to us via e-mail (put The Big Easel in the subject line) or write to Amy "The Big Easel" Vozeolas c/o MAD Magazine, 1700 Broadway, NY, NY 10019.

THE LIZARD OF ODD

In MAD #472 in the article "What Would Happen to Disney Characters in the Real World?" you show Jiminy Cricket getting eaten by the Geico Gecko. I found a mess-up. Geckos don't have long tongues, chameleons do. When a gecko attacks prey, they lunge forward. Chameleons, on the other hand, spit their tongue out like what you showed!

Evan Scott, Via e-mail

Scott's Honor — After we read your letter, we went to Wikipedia (the most trusted source of information) and uncovered even more startling misconceptions and mistakes about geckos! Did you know they don't speak at all, let alone with a British accent — and, as it turns out, most don't work at large insurance firms. Thanks for your courageous whistle blowing and shame on you, Geico, for misleading the American public! —Ed.

A TAD DEMANDING

Please don't ever remove Planet Tad, it's simply the most brilliant parody of all these ridiculous rambling blogs ever. Tad is my hero! I don't pay a single cent of my own money for your magazine because I freeload off the issues available at the library where I work! By the way, good luck coming up with a creative joke on my name — all the obvious ones have already been done!

George Buttner, Dayton, OH

I Can't Believe it's Not Buttner — You read our magazine without giving us anything in return?!? You need to take a lesson from our favorite reader, Jeff S. He throws money our way without even reading a single word! That's the kind of blind devotion we look for in our readers! Not some cheapskate librarian who throws around demands like he's a paying customer! Shame on you for misleading the American public! —Ed.

THE 5 FAST 5'S

GOOD THINGS ABOUT BEING ADOPTED BY MADONNA

- 1 Adoptive father Guy Ritchie will never embarrass you by making a ridiculous Oscar acceptance speech after winning Best Director
- 2 You can finally leave the glitzy phoniness of the Malawi farming scene behind
- 3 It eliminates the possibility that you'll be adopted by Michael Jackson
- 4 You'll be free to choose your own religion, possibly even one of the several she's cynically exploited over the years
- 5 When she punishes you, the comeback "Mama don't preach" practically writes itself

GEORGE BUSH'S POSSIBLE NEW SLOGANS FOR THE INEVITABLE TROOP WITHDRAWAL FROM IRAQ

- 1 "Let's Not Wear Out Our Welcome!"
- 2 "Backwards is a Direction Too!"
- 3 "Mission Accomplished! (Loose Ends Need Work.)"
- 4 "Stray the Course!"
- 5 "We Tried, We Failed, Get Over It!"

FUN FACTS ABOUT THE U.S./ MEXICO BORDER WALL

- 1 For an extra-scary effect, guards will all speak German
- 2 Graffiti will be allowed on the U.S. side, but only if it's written in English
- 3 No matter how high it's built, it can never hold back El Pajaro, The Flying Terror of Mexican Wrestling
- 4 Parts of the wall will be officially used by the U.S. Handball Association
- 5 Somehow, Halliburton got the contract for this project, too

GRAPHIC NOVEL REVIEW

HOW TO DRAW COMICS
THE
NEW YORKER
WAYSCRIVENER'S AND FUNGI
PUBLISHING, 328 PAGES, $22.95

There are only a handful of uniquely American art forms, like jazz or bumfisting. Foremost among these is the classic New Yorker gag cartoon.

Urbane, droll, mostly embalmed, the best of these inscrutable comic situations let their wry subtleties unfold with a delicious slowness. Lots of slowness. The subtleties can often go unnoticed by the casual reader...and certain members of the magazine's editorial staff...and indeed the creators themselves.

At last, the previously opaque and inexplicable formula of the New Yorker cartoon has been broken down for the aspiring contributor. How to Draw Comics the New Yorker Way is a profusely illustrated tutorial that takes a step-by-step approach.

The New Yorker can sometimes seem like a closed shop, in which the same cartoonists appear, week after week, with fresh vacancies being created only by death. But this simply isn't true. The magazine has a backlog of material from many of its dead artists who continue to monopolize New Yorker space, decades after their bones have rotted.

And yet they teach by example. Seeing the way different artists handle the exact same situation is, for lack of a better word, fascinating. The book includes more than 400 office gags showing a boss having a phone conversation at his desk, and from every possible cartooning angle (three). But the tiny differences in stippling, or the choice of background graytone wash? Those sing volumes.

The book is a cornucopia of valuable "tricks of the trade." For example, always draw one character with an open mouth (or in the highly technical jargon, the "speaker"). You don't want the reader to think your cartoon is about telepaths.

When drawing your 300th cartoon depicting a father sitting in a high-backed chair giving implausible, matter-of-fact advice to a child, you may be tempted to vary the object placement. Perhaps by reversing the father and the chair, putting the chair on top. The book explains the drawbacks to this.

One of the more useful chapters gives tips on potential subject matter. (Hint: The readership simply can't get enough talking dogs.) Children acting like adults! Adults acting like children! Animals acting like children OR adults! And all of them behaving with incongruous detachment! It's laugh-not-loud pandemonium!

It's impossible to underrate the cultural importance of the New Yorker cartoon, especially the pointless ones with the short, squiggly king just walking around. These cartoons aren't there merely to fill the space between the overview of the new Frank Stella retrospective at MOMA, and the 14 pages of prose about a Connecticut writer who hates his novel, his wife, his mistress, and himself. They're a fundamental piece of our collective literary tradition. A lot of craft goes into taking whatever catchphrase has been in the public arena lately, and having a sommelier at a wine tasting say it. Or the Grim Reaper. Or a cow.

This book is highly recommended for anybody who's always dreamed of drawing ink wash cartoons about board meetings for the rest of their lives. Whether you hope to appeal to the reader that lives on East 66th Street in Manhattan, or the one on 73rd Street, you'll learn the professional tricks that have produced thousands of imperceptible half-chuckles, furrowed brows, contemplative grimaces, and even the occasional flared nostril.

LESSON 12
KNOW YOUR READER

American culture is constantly changing, and The New Yorker cartoonist must evolve with them, always adapting to the now. Only then can the magazine stay fresh and vital.

KEVIN "K-FED" FEDERLINE
CRAP (PRODUCT) HIS ACT

SPEA(RED)

PARODY

Let's face it, things in Iraq are going about as well as Kevin Federline's rap career. At this point, though, we're in too deep for the people in charge to start admitting they've made a mistake. (We're talking about the war, but it applies to Federline, too.) So they're stuck with the same lame explanations defending the war — but by now, even THEY don't believe what they're saying! Deep, deep in their hearts, though, they know the whole truth — and it's time they share with the rest of the world...

WAR CLICHÉS:

Major combat operations in Iraq have ceased...

...so all the casualties from now on will be strictly from the minor operations.

We grieve for the families of those who lost their lives in the war...

...though we aren't above smearing them if they start to protest too loudly.

We salute the brave men and women of the armed forces...

...because saluting them doesn't cost us anything — unlike, say, adequate body armor.

September 11th changed everything...

...except our plans to invade Iraq, which were laid out long before the first Tower fell.

IIIQ+

COMPLETING THE SENTENCES

People who want to toss in the towel were wrong yesterday, they're wrong today, and they'll be wrong tomorrow...

The insurgency is in the last throes...

...and then the next insurgency will take over.

...but they should be proven right sometime in 2007.

Criticizing a president during time of war borders on treason...

...unless that President is a Democrat.

Osama bin Laden can run, but he cannot hide...

MAD AD
PARODY

The Eye of a Kitten

My name is Joe and I've been a Chicago fireman for almost five months now. In that time you could say I've seen it all. I've seen buildings on fire. I've seen buildings NOT on fire. I've seen things on fire I swear I didn't think could even catch on fire. I've seen "safety" matches that, frankly, didn't look all that "safe." But nothing prepared me for seeing an overcrowded nursing home on fire with an adorable litter of kittens, all confused and scared, trapped inside!

There's more to being a fireman than racing through red lights, squirting water into windows and chopping down doors.

It's called saving lives.

But is a human's life more important than a kitten's? I don't know; that wasn't on the firemen's test. But I know how I felt when I looked in the window and through the smoke saw all those elderly people in a panic, every one of them capable of stepping right on one of those little, defenseless, darling kittens.

I smashed a window, sending glass everywhere. As I went to pick up their cardboard home, it crumbled in my hands. I grabbed a fire helmet from a colleague who had collapsed nearby and I used it as a basket for them. Then outside, I jumped into the closest truck, turned on the siren, and drove north, where I remembered there was a veterinarian's office.

I rushed in and handed over the kittens to one of the several vets sitting around the reception area. I didn't have to say anything; my gear and expression said it all and they sprang into action.

Nervously, I paced for what seemed like hours. Finally, a vet emerged and asked me how I wanted to pay for this. I told him we'd charge it to the county.

"In that case, we better do more testing," he winked and added, "You go home and get some rest; you can't do any good here."

What good could I do at home? I'd just worry myself sick to the point of vomiting. But I did go home for a change of clothes and, sure enough, I vomited on them before I could get into them.

There were a number of messages on my answering machine. Most were from the Chief, who wanted to know where I was and what I did with the hook and ladder. Some folks just aren't cat people and you-know-who, I'm afraid, is one of them. I'd call him later; I didn't want to tie up my phone in case the doctors needed to reach me with some urgent, early test results.

For the next two weeks I practically lived in their reception area, praying for their recovery. At last the test results came: there was a piece of glass in a paw of one kitten, several of them had been dehydrated, and all of them had become addicted to pain killers, but overall, it was good news.

I didn't realize that each of the kittens had been assigned their own night nurse but that sure explained why the bill was almost six figures.

Since their other "home" was burnt to a crisp, I realized I now had 7 new "roommates."

When we got home, I was surprised to learn there was a warrant out for my arrest. It was then I realized that these fuzzy treasures had a special gift to give me.

No matter how bad things appeared, if I just looked into their big, adorable eyes, everything became all right for a while. And if I did that often enough, I found everything was all right for more than a while. They were magical hours that turned into magical days. Then magical weeks soon followed.

Try it and see for yourself. It's what I have come to call the Miracle of the Kittens. But before that, I called it Kitty-time in Blissville. I'd tried Felines in Funtown – that was okay for a while, but then it started to annoy me. Puttie Tats in Wonderland actually pissed me off, but I used it anyway. Then there's Cutie-Pies from Kremulon, which is a distant planet I travel to when things get weird on Earth and I get the feeling my head is going to start changing shape again.

I'm going to take the kitties with me next time.

— Joe the Fireman

WARMING THAT AL GORE DIDN'T MENTION

Everybody knows the 5-Second Rule: after you drop a piece of food on the floor, you've got 5 seconds to pick it up before it officially becomes "dirty" and not edible. It's one of those rules that helps people live their lives (and contract salmonella). But some need more help than others (especially MAD readers)! And that's why we've come up with these...

OTHER RULES

INSPIRED BY THE

SECOND RULE

10-Second Rule

How long you can hold your wife's purse before it becomes emasculating.

7-Second Rule

How long you can stand in front of an ATM looking at your receipt before the guy behind you makes a comment.

2-Second Rule

How long you may "shake" at the urinal before zipping up and flushing.

4-Second Rule

How long you can safely stare at your friend's girlfriend's boobs before getting punched in the face.

3-Second Rule

How long you have to wait after someone relinquishes the "best TV seat" before you're allowed to scramble over and take it.

14-Second Rule

How long you have to pin on your prom date's corsage before her parents suspect you're trying to cop a cheap feel.

35-Second Rule

How long the wetness of your great-grandmother's kiss has to linger on your cheek before you're allowed to scrub it off with your shirtsleeve.

29-Second Rule

How long you have to mourn your dead goldfish before you flush him.

11-Second Rule

How long you can let a dog sniff your crotch before the owner thinks you're enjoying it.

420-Second Rule

How long you can be in a locked bathroom before your mom asks, "What are you doing in there?"

6-Second Rule

How long you have to wait after asking "Who wants the last doughnut?" before you're allowed to snatch up the last doughnut.

49-Second Rule

How long you can sniff your T-shirts to determine if you can get one more day out of them before taking your roommate's advice to "just wash them already."

14-Second Rule

How long you can make silly faces at a little kid in the grocery store before his parents start to feel a little uncomfortable.

25-Second Rule

How long you have to wait after your teacher walks by before you can go back to texting.

9-Second Rule

How long you can ogle the Hustler and Barely Legal covers at a magazine stand before the other customers think you're a perv.

.0005-Second Rule

How long you can read a MAD article before you get sick of the same old tired jokes.

LATER...

HUMMANA WHOZIWITZ?

HI, MONROE.

I'M SORRY ABOUT BEFORE. MY FRIENDS CAN BE REAL JERKS SOMETIMES.

OH, uh, NO PROBLEM.

NO, IT WAS TERRIBLE. SO, CAN I MAKE IT UP TO YOU AND TAKE YOU TO THE DANCE SATURDAY?

I SWEAR, MOM, IF YOU WAKE ME UP FROM THIS DREAM, I'LL GO SCHIZO.

SATURDAY, 6:45 PM...

SEE, GRANDPA'S OLD SUIT JUST NEEDED TO BE TAKEN IN.

YOU DUCT TAPED AND STAPLED IT. I CAN'T EVEN REALLY GET MY ARM THROUGH THIS SLEEVE.

QUIT YER COMPLAINING. SHE PROBABLY AIN'T SHOWING UP ANYWAY.

DING DING!

PREPARE TO EAT IT, PEOPLE.

WOWSERS! IF I WAS THIRTY YEARS YOUNGER.

YOU'D STILL BE WAY TOO OLD! LET'S GO.

Um, WEIRD MEETING YOU ALL. BYE.

SOON...

WELL?

CAN'T SAY WE DIDN'T TRY. LET'S GO.

WOW. I NEVER USUALLY COME TO THESE. ALSO I NEVER USUALLY SWEAT THIS HEAVILY.

YOU BET. JUST LET ME SQUEEGEE OFF.

JUST TRY TO HOLD IT TOGETHER. FOR ME?

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE NOT SEEING THINGS! IT'S ME, MONROE, WITH ABIGAIL MCSAUNDERS!

OKAY, TAKE IT DOWN A LITTLE.

Frindle 2: On Second Thought...

Andrew Clements 250 pages

In fifth grade, clever troublemaker Nick Allen asked why a pen needed to be called a pen — why couldn't it be called a...Frindle? Before he knew it, his crazy experiment had become a national phenomenon and everyone was calling pens "Frindles." In this satisfactory sequel, Nick decides that maybe "Pen" was a better name after all and that whole "Frindle" stuff was just a stupid waste of time. As the book ends, a pen is no longer a Frindle — it's a pen!
